INTRODUCTION

In the past year, more than 110,000 Americans lost their lives to drug overdose — a tragic number that becomes more sobering when contrasted with the over 67,000 in 2018. With each passing year, the number of lives lost due to drug overdose reaches a new record high. These losses are felt deeply in states like California, who lost over 10,000 individuals in 2021 from accidental overdose of the synthetic opioid fentanyl alone.

The disease of addiction — what the public health community now commonly refers to as ‘substance use disorder’ (SUD) — is preventable, treatable, and does not need to be fatal. More is understood about the brain science of substance use disorders than ever before, and we know that when a person with a SUD is treated with compassion and provided with the right resources, recovery from SUD is real and possible. People living with the disease of addiction have gone on to lead wonderful and fulfilling lives — starting businesses, regaining their families, and becoming productive members of society once again.

In conjunction with the California Department of Health Care Services, we are pleased to present this resource guide to the Los Angeles community. This guide provides a listing of prevention, treatment and recovery resources for those seeking information, whether it is for themselves, a loved one, or a peer. We hope that this guide brings hope and healing to individuals, families, and communities.

This guide attempts to provide a comprehensive list of resources and services that are available to the large and diverse community of Los Angeles and its surrounding areas. It is designed to help residents locate their needed resources and to help navigate through the network of available services in Los Angeles County and beyond. We hope you have found this guide useful — if you have, please pass it on to another person who needs it!

Substance Use Disorder Treatment Programs

The goal of substance use disorder treatment is to help individuals stop or reduce harmful substance misuse, improve their health and social function, and manage their risk for relapse. Treatment services are traditionally provided in residential and outpatient programs that are outside of the main healthcare system and may include medication, counseling, and other supportive services. The type and duration of treatment depend on the severity of the substance use disorder. Mild substance use disorders often respond to brief interventions and supportive monitoring. Severe substance use disorders often require specialty treatment and continued post-treatment support to achieve full remission and recovery.

In addition to the resources provided in the guide, there are two search engines that may provide you with additional resources and information about treatment and recovery from substance use disorders.

SAMHSA BEHAVIORAL HEALTH TREATMENT LOCATOR

This online resource from the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) allows users to search for mental health and substance use disorder treatment services in their area. Searches can be limited by state, county, and distance from a specific location. Users may find this tool helpful to expand their search for resources in their area beyond the scope of this guide.

ATLAS TREATMENT LOCATOR

The Department of Health Care Services (DHCS) partnered with Shatterproof to create a statewide treatment locator called ATLAS, a free, easy-to-use online directory of treatment facilities. Users can take a 13-question survey to help them find a licensed or certified treatment provider to assist with their specific needs.

ICON KEY

With over 300 substance use disorder treatment facilities within 25 miles of Los Angeles, locating which facility is the most needed is often confusing and overwhelming. Because different treatment facilities provide different types and styles of treatment, we have provided this icon key that identifies treatment information in an efficient manner. The icons placed next to the name of each facility allow the reader to locate the treatment center that best suits the needs of the potential client or patient. The definition of each icon can be found below.

O Outpatient Treatment: This type of treatment requires patients to report daily (usually weekdays) to treatment rather than overnight stays at a hospital or residential facility.

H Residential/Inpatient Treatment: This type of treatment requires patients to live and stay overnight at the treatment facility or hospital, usually for 30, 60, or 90-day period. This is the highest level of treatment services for those diagnosed with substance use disorders.

IOP Intensive Outpatient Program: A type of outpatient treatment program with additional components such as additional counseling or classes, usually for four hours a day for two to three days a week. IOP is recommended for those who no longer require 24-hour supervision.

PHP Partial Hospitalization Program: A type of outpatient treatment program that includes a more intensive, rigorous treatment schedule than IOP, usually involving treatment for five days a week, up to eight hours a day. PHP is recommended for those just exiting residential treatment who need additional structural support.

MAT Medication-Assisted Treatment: This type of treatment uses FDA-approved medication, in conjunction with counseling and behavioral therapies, to treat substance use disorders. Medication-assisted treatment has proven to be effective in treating alcohol use disorder and opioid use disorder.

DT Detox Program: Offers a detox program, where someone with a substance use disorder can, under supervision, come off of the physical dependence of alcohol or other drugs. This is often the first level of treatment for a SUD. Withdrawal from a substance can occur with a variety of uncomfortable physical symptoms, and a detox program can safely manage those symptoms under the care and supervision of medical professionals.

∞ Co-occurring Disorder Treatment (or “Dual Diagnosis”): Offers treatment for not simply substance use disorders, but other co-occurring mental health disorders as well. Many individuals with a SUD also have other mental health disorders, including depression, anxiety, and PTSD, and these disorders play a role in the individual’s desire to either use substances or to abstain. This facility also treats these disorders and takes them just as seriously as addiction.

12 12-Step Foundation: Incorporates 12-Step programs such as Alcoholics Anonymous and Narcotics Anonymous into its treatment, whether through meetings, literature, or both. While 12-Step programs are not the only way to treat substance use disorders, many facilities use them as the basis for their treatment programs as the foundation for treatment and maintaining long-term recovery.

A Adolescent Program: Offers a program for young adults or adolescent individuals under the age of 18.

+ Christian-Based: Offers Christian-based treatment for substance use disorders.

☆ Jewish-Based: Offers Judaism-based treatment for substance use disorders.

+ LGBTQ+: Offers specific treatment for LGBTQ+ individuals with substance use disorders or has made a public effort to be inclusive to the LGBTQ+ lifestyle.

♀ For Women: Offers treatment specific to women or has a women-only recovery residence.

♂ For Men: Offers treatment specific to men or has a men-only recovery residence.

Recovery Residences

Recovery Residences are facilities that provide safe housing and structured living conditions for people exiting treatment for substance use disorder. Also called sober living houses, sober living homes, or sober living environments, recovery residences serve as a transitional environment between such programs and mainstream society.

Chandler Lodge

A men's recovery residence founded in 1960 by members of Alcoholics Anonymous. Offers three separate sober living houses. Meals and mandatory drug testing are included in the monthly rent. Self-payment of $900 per month accepted.

11455 West Chandler Boulevard, Los Angeles CA, 91601
818-766-4534

Casa de las Amigas

An abstinence-based women's recovery residence as part of the Pasadena treatment facility. The residence has 38 beds and their programs run up to one year.

Accepts federal, or any government funding for substance use treatment programs; private health insurance, cash or self-payment and state-financed health insurance plans other than Medicaid.

Mental Health Services

Mental health counseling and therapy are ways of helping people with mental health concerns. A large percentage of people with substance use disorders also deal with other mental health disorders, such as depression, anxiety, and post-traumatic stress disorder. Some of these facilities listed here also treat substance use disorders, but not all.

Mutual Aid Groups and Other Supportive Organizations (Local)

Mutual aid groups, such as 12-step programs, provide support and fellowship for people recovering from addictive behaviors. The members share a problem or status, and they value experiential knowledge — learning from each other’s experiences is a central element — and they focus on personal-change goals. The groups are voluntary associations that charge no fees and are self-led by members.

Alcoholics Anonymous (AA)

12-step recovery meetings for those who want to achieve or maintain sobriety. Focus on spiritual growth, but not a religious organization. Free.

Glossary of Key Terms

12-Step Program: A group providing mutual support and fellowship for people recovering from addictive behaviors. The first 12-step program was Alcoholics Anonymous (AA), founded in 1935; an array of 12-step groups following a similar model have since emerged and are the most widely used mutual aid groups and steps for maintaining recovery from alcohol and drug use disorders. It is not a form of treatment, and it is not to be confused with the treatment modality called Twelve-Step Facilitation.

Abstinence: Not using alcohol or drugs.

Addiction: The most severe form of substance use disorder, associated with compulsive or uncontrolled use of one or more substances. Addiction is a chronic brain disease that has the potential for both recurrence (relapse) and recovery.

Binge Drinking: For men, drinking 5 or more standard alcoholic drinks, and for women, 4 or more standard alcoholic drinks on the same occasion on at least 1 day in the past 30 days.

Case Management: A coordinated approach to delivering general health care, substance use disorder treatment, mental health, and social services. This approach links clients with appropriate services to address specific needs and goals.

Compulsivity: Repetitive behaviors in the face of adverse consequences, as well as repetitive behaviors that are inappropriate to a particular situation. People suffering from compulsions often recognize that the behaviors are harmful, but they nonetheless feel emotionally compelled to perform them.

Continuum of Care: An integrated system of care that guides and tracks a person over time through a comprehensive array of health services appropriate to the individual's needs. A continuum of care may include prevention, early intervention, treatment, continuing care, and recovery support.

Dependence: A state in which an organism only functions normally in the presence of a substance, experiencing physical disturbance when the substance is removed. A person can be dependent on a substance without being addicted, but dependence sometimes leads to addiction.

Drug Diversion: A medical and legal concept involving the transfer of any legally prescribed controlled substance from the person for whom it was prescribed to another person for any illicit use.

Heavy Drinking: Defined by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) as consuming 8 or more drinks per week for women, and 15 or more drinks per week for men, and by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA), for research purposes, as binge drinking on 5 or more days in the past 30 days.

Intervention: A professionally delivered program, service, or policy designed to prevent substance misuse (prevention intervention) or treat a substance use disorder (treatment intervention).

Medication-assisted treatment (MAT): MAT is the use of FDA-approved medications, in combination with counseling and behavioral therapies, to provide a “whole-patient” approach to the treatment of substance use disorders. Research shows that a combination of medication and therapy can successfully treat these disorders, and for some people struggling with addiction, MAT can help sustain recovery. The FDA has approved several different medications to treat opioid use disorder and alcohol use disorder.

Negative Reinforcement: The process by which removal of a stimulus such as negative feelings or emotions increases the probability of a response like drug taking.

Opioid Treatment Program (OTP): SAMHSA-certified program, usually comprising a facility, staff, administration, patients, and services, that engages in supervised assessment and treatment, using methadone, buprenorphine, or naltrexone, of individuals who have opioid use disorders. An OTP can exist in a number of settings, including but not limited to intensive outpatient, residential, and hospital settings. Services may include medically supervised withdrawal and/or maintenance treatment, along with various levels of medical, psychiatric, psychosocial, and other types of supportive care.

Positive Reinforcement: The process by which the presentation of a stimulus such as a drug increases the probability of a response like drug taking.

Prescription Drug Misuse: Use of a drug in any way a doctor did not direct an individual to use it.

Protective Factors: Factors that directly decrease the likelihood of substance use and behavioral health problems or reduce the impact of risk factors on behavioral health problems.

Recovery: A process of change through which individuals improve their health and wellness, live a self-directed life, and strive to reach their full potential. Even individuals with severe and chronic substance use disorders can, with help, overcome their substance use disorder and regain health and social function. This is called remission. When those positive changes and values become part of a voluntarily adopted lifestyle, that is called “being in recovery”. Although abstinence from all substance misuse is a cardinal feature of a recovery lifestyle, it is not the only healthy, pro-social feature.

Relapse: The return to alcohol or drug use after a significant period of abstinence. A more compassionate term that is being used more often is “having or had a setback.”

Remission: A medical term meaning that major disease symptoms are eliminated or diminished below a pre-determined, harmful level.

Risk Factors: Factors that increase the likelihood of beginning substance use, of regular and harmful use, and of other behavioral health problems associated with use.

Substance: A psychoactive compound with the potential to cause health and social problems, including substance use disorders (and their most severe manifestation, addiction).

Substance Misuse: The use of any substance in a manner, situation, amount or frequency that can cause harm to users or to those around them. For some substances or individuals, any use would constitute as misuse (e.g., under-age drinking, injection drug use).

Substance Misuse Problems or Consequences: Any health or social problem that results from substance misuse. Substance misuse problems or consequences may affect the substance user or those around them, and they may be acute (e.g., an argument or fight, a motor vehicle crash, an overdose) or chronic (e.g., a long-term substance-related medical, family, or employment problem, or chronic medical condition, such as various cancers, heart disease, and liver disease). These problems may occur at any age and are more likely to occur with a greater frequency of substance misuse.

Substance Use: The use—even one time—of any substance.

Substance Use Disorders: A medical illness caused by repeated misuse of a substance or substances. According to the Fifth Edition of the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders (DSM-5), substance use disorders are characterized by clinically significant impairments in health, social function, and impaired control over substance use and are diagnosed through assessing cognitive, behavioral, and psychological symptoms. Substance use disorders range from mild to severe and from temporary to chronic. They typically develop gradually over time with repeated misuse, leading to changes in brain circuits governing incentive salience (the ability of substance-associated cues to trigger substance seeking), reward, stress, and executive functions like decision-making and self-control.

Substance Use Disorder Treatment: A service or set of services that may include medication, counseling, and other supportive services designed to enable an individual to reduce or eliminate alcohol and/or other drug use, address associated physical or mental health problems, and restore the patient to maximum functional ability.

Tolerance: Alteration of the body's responsiveness to alcohol or a drug such that higher doses are required to produce the same effect achieved during initial use.

Withdrawal: A set of symptoms that are experienced when discontinuing use of a substance to which a person has become dependent or addicted, which can include negative emotions such as stress, anxiety, or depression, as well as physical effects such as nausea, vomiting, muscle aches, and cramping, among others. Withdrawal symptoms often lead a person to use the substance again.

Wrap-Around Services: Wrap-around services are non-clinical services that facilitate patient engagement and retention in treatment as well as their ongoing recovery. This can include services to address patient needs related to transportation, employment, childcare, housing, and legal and financial problems, among others.
